CU Employee Guidelines <sup>[1]</sup>

A CU Advocate may be asked to share their personal opinion with elected officials about issues affecting the CU campuses.

We'll provide the tools and background to share your opinions. If you're a CU employee, we suggest using your personal contact information (address, phone number, or e-mail address) when contacting elected officials and that you do so during non-work time. We've found that not only does this ensure that we are using public resources in a responsible manner, but elected officials appreciate the personal touch that comes when a citizen reaches out as an individual and a voter in the legislator's district, rather than as an employee.
