

2017 Diversity Summit ^[1]

- Diversity Summit
- Keynote Speaker
- Schedule

The 2017 University of Colorado Diversity Summit offers faculty, staff and administration a space to examine and learn best practices for fostering inclusion on our campuses and within the university system. The summit recognizes effective strategies and initiatives, and targets areas of weakness to work toward improvement.

Commitments to diversity and inclusion are part of our campus missions and core values, yet these statements alone do not make our campuses diverse and inclusive. Our goal is to fully engage participants and offer tangible and effective strategies that they can implement as employees of the University of Colorado.

DATE:

Monday, March 6, 2017
8 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.

Professor Sarah Willie-LeBreton

Professor of Sociology from Swarthmore College, Sarah Willie-LeBreton studies higher education and, informed by her work with community groups, teaches courses on African-American culture, politics, race, racism, and social inequality. She considers herself an applied sociologist and has worked with a variety of groups on inclusivity and justice initiatives. Her research explores minority/majority and subordinate/superordinate relations, the construction of knowledge, and the subversion of oppression. She is the author of Acting Black: College, Identity and the Performance of Race [5] (Routledge 2003), a study of college-educated African-Americans in the post-civil rights movement era, and an editor and contributor for Transforming the Academy: Faculty Perspectives on Diversity and Pedagogy ^[6] (Rutgers 2016).
