Special Notes

Campus Printing

Start your printing procurement process with your campus print shop or publications office. Departments should seek printing and publications work from external vendors only if the internal print shops cannot meet their needs.

When Campus Services are not an Option

If the campus print shop or publications office is unable to accomplish the job, departments should obtain quotes from external vendors. The vendor's quote should include the dollar amount, plus or minus for overages, and all shipping and delivery charges.

Specifications for Vendors

To assist in obtaining an accurate quote, departments should provide complete information to the vendor, including:

General description of project, with samples of similar printed pieces (if available)

Quantity needed, including options for larger/smaller quantities (Printers do not guarantee exact counts unless specified so if a specific quantity is required, with no overs or unders, ask the printer to agree to this requirement in writing.)

- Number of issues such as once a month, twice a semester, etc.
- Quality
- Paper stock/color
- Numbers/colors of inks
- Size (including flat size, folded size, and/or number of pages, plus cover or self cover)
- Art (is the art work supplied, what graphics software, is it a PDF File)
- Binding, folding, and mailing requirements
- Proofs/On Press Approval
- Production Schedule (Date to Printer, Date for Delivery, Delivery location(s))
- Budget limit

Important Printing Considerations

Avoid nonstandard publishing software (e.g., MS-Word, MS-Publisher, WordPerfect): use a graphics program or PDF file formats instead. Inform the vendor about the software applications, type of computer, and fonts being used.

Provide files on disk and include a printout. If applicable, also include a sample folded mock-up to illustrate the desired final product. If working with a new vendor, provide a test file to ensure that there are no unanswered questions at the time of final printing.

Build in more preparation time than is estimated as necessary to allow for the unexpected. Have more than one person proof-read the initial work several times and have more than one person check the printer proofs thoroughly before signing off on the job.
