13.F: Gifts Benefiting the University of Colorado [1]

The University of Colorado Foundation (CUF) is designated as the primary recipient of all gifts given for the benefit of the university. Accordingly, it shall be presumed that any charitable contribution directed to the university or any of its organizational units was intended to be directed to and managed by the CUF, except where clear evidence of donor intent to the contrary exists and subject to any exceptions established by the president. The president is authorized to transfer to the CUF monies and title to any asset derived from a charitable contribution directed to the university whenever, in the sole discretion of the president, the good of the university so requires.
