Follow our new guide to process overpayments and find helpful tips

May 7, 2021 by Employee Services

We get it. Sometimes, employees can be paid an inaccurate amount, creating overpayments. But don’t worry; Employee Services has a procedure in place to reconcile an employee’s pay.

When a department discovers an employee has been overpaid, they must process a Notice of Overpayment Adjustment (NOPA) form. We’ve created a new step-by-step guide to walk you through the process of correcting an overpayment – from collecting the necessary information to sending the form to Employee Services.

Here are a few habits & tips that can help to avoid overpayments in the future:

- Review your payroll registers every pay cycle.
- When an employee leaves CU, make sure you terminate them in the payroll system.
- After payroll runs, complete pay pulls as quickly as possible. Check your payroll calendar – the pull deadline is 2 days before the pay day.
- Double-check pay codes. Sometimes, overpayments result from two positions assigned to one person.
- Have someone retiring? Make sure the dates in HCM align with their retirement effective date to avoid extra pay.
- If you are paying an employee after an overpayment has been processed, please complete a HandDrawn Warrant rather than an off-cycle entry for payment. HCM will not capture an overpayment deduction from an off-cycle entry. Let us know that a HandDrawn Warrant is coming, and we’ll get as much back to the department as we can.

Have questions about overpayments? Email hcm_community@cu.edu.

Source URL: https://www.cu.edu/blog/hcm-community/follow-our-new-guide-process-overpayments-and-find-helpful-tips

Links
[3] https://www.cu.edu/docs/completing-notice-overpayment-adjustment