

International employees and students: Make sure your records are accurate before year's end ^[1]

November 11, 2025 by ES and UIS Communications ^[2]

As the year's end approaches, the International Tax Office ^[3] is preparing to generate the required tax reporting forms for 2025. The team is also reviewing 2026 tax requirements for international employees and students, including determining tax residency and tax treaty eligibility for the new year.

Now is a great time to log in and review your Sprintax Calculus ^[4] profile. Make sure your information is up-to-date and that you've consented to receive Form 1042-S electronically (instead of by mail) if you prefer.

Examples of important updates to report in Sprintax: Changes to your mailing address, passport number, program expiration date, immigration status or the addition of a newly obtained Social Security number. If your 2025 Sprintax record is locked and you need to make updates, email intltax@cu.edu ^[5] to reopen it.

You should also keep an eye out for emails from cuintltax-noreply@sprintax.com ^[6] throughout the year. These messages may ask you to:

- Activate your Sprintax profile (the email will include an activation link).
- Complete profiles that have been activated but are still incomplete.
- Upload current immigration documents when your status has changed or has been extended.
- E-sign a new tax form to reflect changes in residency status to continue tax treaty benefits.

Respond to Sprintax email requests

- Watch for messages from cuintltax-noreply@sprintax.com ^[6] asking you to review your Sprintax Calculus profile.
- Respond as soon as possible — it's crucial to complete requested updates before the end of the year.

Verify personal data for tax season

- International employees: Check that your name and Social Security number in the CU employee portal [7] and in Sprintax Calculus [4] match your Social Security card.
- International employees and students: Keep your mailing address current in your CU employee [7] or campus student portal.
