

Retirement Savings Plans <sup>[1]</sup>

Grow your retirement savings with CU's retirement plans.

GMEs automatically enrolled into CU's 403(b) plan

The University of Colorado Office of Graduate Medical Education (GME) debuted the CU 403(b) GME Retirement Option on Jan. 1, 2025. GME medical residents are automatically enrolled upon hiring and eligible for an employer contribution — but whether and how you participate is up to you.

- GME residents will contribute 0.5% of your monthly pre-tax income (unless you choose the ROTH option or opt for more savings).
  - CU will contribute 1% of your monthly income through June 30, 2026.
  - Combined with your 0.5% contribution, your 403(b) will receive a contribution totaling 1.5% of your monthly income (unless you opt for a higher personal contribution, in which case it will total 1% plus whatever contribution you elect) each pay period.
- You must take action to opt out if you do not wish to contribute. Residents who opt out, or who do not contribute the minimum of 0.5%, will not receive the employer match.
- You can enroll, change or terminate your contributions at any time. Click on the CU 403(b) for GMEs tile below to find links to enroll in or update your contributions.

Changes coming July 1, 2026:

Starting July 1, 2026, CU will increase the employer match contribution to 2% of the resident's pre-tax wages.

- This only applies to residents who contribute 0.5% (or more) of their monthly income.
- If you already contribute the minimum 0.5%, you don't need to take any action. You will see the increased employer match contribution in your first July paycheck.
- Those who have opted out of the retirement plan, or who are not currently contributing the minimum 0.5% required for the match, will not receive the employer match. However, you can opt in or increase your contribution at any time.
