

CU 403(b) ^[1]

Graduate Medical Education (GME) residents are automatically enrolled into the CU 403(b) Retirement Option Plan — but whether and how you participate is up to you.

2025-26 Plan basics

- GME residents will be automatically enrolled in the CU 403(b) Retirement Option Plan, contributing 0.5% pre-tax of your monthly income.
- CU will contribute 1% of your monthly income as long as you participate — totaling 1.5% contributed to your CU 403(b) account.

Employer match to increase July 1, 2026

Starting July 1, 2026, CU will increase the employer match contribution to 2% of the resident's pre-tax wages.

- This only applies to residents who contribute 0.5% (or more) of their monthly pre-tax income to their 403(b) account.
- If you already contribute the minimum 0.5%, you don't need to take any action. You will see the increased employer match contribution in your first July paycheck.
- Those who have opted out of the retirement plan, or who are not currently contributing the minimum 0.5% required for the match, will not receive the employer match. However, you can opt in or increase your contribution at any time. See enrollment and update links below.

Enrollment options

You can enroll, change or terminate your contributions at any time.

- Take no action and be automatically enrolled in the 403(b) plan when you're hired.
- Opt out of the plan entirely, and you will not be eligible for the employer contribution.
- Change contribution election from pre-tax to Roth (after-tax), meaning your 0.5% elections will be deducted after tax.
- Contribute more than the default 0.5% contribution rate.
 - If you choose to contribute more, the employer match will not change.
