

Faculty Handbook: Introduction to the University ^[1]

Please note: A comprehensive review of all Regent Laws and Policies is currently underway. Faculty Handbook references to Law and Policy and related Administrative Policy Statements have not yet been updated to reflect recent changes. For the most recent information, please visit <https://www.cu.edu/regents/laws-and-policies> ^[2] or <https://www.cu.edu/ope/aps> ^[3].

At the first session of Colorado's territorial legislature in 1861, a bill was passed providing for a university at Boulder. Boulder residents donated land south of town and made gifts to match the $15,000 appropriated by the legislature for construction of the university. The university opened its doors on September 5, 1877, with 44 students, one instructor, and a president.

Today the University is composed of campuses at Boulder, Colorado Springs, Denver and the Anschutz Medical Campus in Aurora. Each of the four campuses of the University has a distinct role and mission. The role and mission for each campus is recorded in Colorado Statutes (C.R.S. §23-20-101, 1997).

The University is governed by an elected board of nine regents. There is a secretary of the Board of Regents and of the University. The Regents elect the president of the University of Colorado, who is the principal executive officer of the University. The offices of the president are sometimes referred to as "system administration." There is a chancellor of each campus, who is the chief academic and administrative officer responsible to the president for the conduct of the affairs of the campus. The dean of each college or school is the principal administrative officer for the college or school. The colleges and schools are composed of one or more units. The Board of Regents has approved other academic or research units, including numerous research centers, institutes, bureaus and laboratories.
