John "Jack" Kroll is a proud Denver native and University of Colorado alumnus and is honored to serve his constituents and the university as the Regent from Colorado's 1st Congressional District. The University of Colorado Denver awarded Jack his bachelor's degrees in economics and English in 2011. Jack also earned his masters degree in finance and risk management from the Denver campus in 2020.

Professionally, Jack works full-time for the University of Colorado Boulder as an Associate Director of Admissions. This role places him on the frontline of the fight for access and affordability to higher education. It is his job, every day, to help students realize their dream of a college education.

The brother and son of veterans, Jack is especially passionate about helping men and women transition out of the military and into college. He founded CU Boulder Military Student Day, which allows veterans and their family members to explore the educational opportunities...
Previously Jack served as President of the University of Colorado Denver Alumni Association. In his time with the Alumni Association, he helped the board to raise over $300,000 in scholarship funds [5].

As an undergraduate student at CU Denver, Jack served as Student Body President and then as Chair of the Inter-Campus Student Forum [6], a position that allowed him to represent all 55,000 students in the University of Colorado system to the university’s Board of Regents.

Jack is married to Vanessa Roman from Pueblo. She previously served on the CU Boulder Alumni Board of Advisors and is currently the Co-President of the CU Boulder Latino Alumni Association. She strives to extend opportunities for higher education to all students and did so previously in her role as Associate Director of Admissions for CU Boulder. Vanessa now serves as the head of outreach for AdvanceEDU, which is Denver’s first hybrid college. In January of 2020 Jack and Vanessa welcomed their first child, Lucy Amelia Roman-Kroll.

Jack is honored to be fulfilling the roles of a new father, active alum, full-time employee, recently graduated graduate student, and Regent for the University of Colorado.
