The RAVE Notification System is an alerting service used by the University of Colorado System Administration campus to communicate information regarding service maintenance events, service interruptions, 1800 Grant building emergencies, and System Administration building closures due to inclement weather.

CU System Administration follows CU Denver's weather closure schedule. By signing up for texts, you'll receive CU Denver's weather closure and delay alerts, which also apply to CU System Administration.

Who uses RAVE?

CU System Administration employees are automatically enrolled to receive email alerts and can optionally receive alerts via text message. If you are not a System Administration employee, but still work at CU, and would like to receive alerts, or are a System Administration employee and would like to receive text message alerts, please complete the registration form [2]. Only CU emails will be added into our system.

Register for RAVE

To register to receive RAVE notifications, fill out the webform [2].

RAVE via text messaging

Getting RAVE by texts is optional. If you would like to update your account with your cell phone number, please add it to the webform [2]. If you would like to unsubscribe from System Administration, email uiscommunications@cu.edu [3].
