Degree Audit and Transfer Credit [1]

The Degree Audit and Transfer Credit (DATC) [2]system is for tracking academic progress toward graduation and evaluate CU and transfer courses to a specific academic program.

Benefits of DATC:

- Helps transfer students better understand the necessary path toward completing a degree
- Allows faculty advisors and staff to visually walk students through their academic paths. Often used as a planning tool during orientation, registration periods and graduation
- Automates degree auditing, allowing advisors to spend more time advising students and less time doing hour and GPA calculations

Request access

To request access, you must fill out the CU-SIS Access Request Form [3].

For questions regarding DATC access, please reach out to your respective campus access coordinator. Each campus has security coordinator that reviews and approves the appropriate access.

Common users

University staff, college representatives and advising staff, administrative users in various business offices, administrative users in CU Boulder's Office of International Education and students across all campuses.
