Published on University of Colorado (https://www.cu.edu)

Statement of the University of Colorado regarding recent visa revocations [1]

April 25 Update

We are aware of the reinstatement of some student visas across our campuses. As we have since student visa revocations began, we are keeping our focus on supporting our impacted students and all international students.

April 17, 2025 (Updated from April 8)

The University of Colorado System can confirm, as of this posting, that 22 international students across all four of our campuses have had their student visa status revoked. Federal agencies involved in these revocations are not sharing with CU the specific reasons for their actions.

At CU we are focused on supporting the success of all of our students, including international students. Each one of our students is seeking to advance their career and the lives of their family, and we understand the anxieties that visa revocations cause to impacted students. We urge any international student with questions or concerns to reach out to their campus' international student office as well as their home country embassy.

We will not be releasing ongoing updates or names and details of any specific student circumstances due to federal laws that protect the privacy rights of students and their educational data unless court ordered to do so.

Groups audience:
University Relations

Source URL:https://www.cu.edu/university-relations/statements/statement-university-colorado-regarding-recent-visa-revocations

Links
[1] https://www.cu.edu/university-relations/statements/statement-university-colorado-regarding-recent-visa-revocations